EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

- The Daily Telegraph (page 3) reports the Federal Government has pledged $17 million towards free mental health support for new parents, as research shows post-natal depression affects one in five new mothers and one in 10 fathers. Health Minister Mark Butler said becoming a parent was a profound change and for many parents it could be overwhelming.
- The Australian Financial Review (page 15) reports drug manufacturer Eli Lilly has threatened to withdraw tens of millions of dollars from Australian clinical trials unless the Federal Government speeds up the process to approve medicines for the Pharmaceutical Benefits Scheme.
- The Herald Sun (page 4) and The Australian (Online) lead coverage reporting CT scans may be contributing to tens of thousands of cases of cancer a year, according to a study of US data by the Institute of Cancer Research in London, with the authors warning doctors not to be complacent about the radiation risk the scans pose.
- The Daily Telegraph (page 6) reports an independent study of the Medicare Urgent Care Clinics has found that even though up to 334,000 hospital visits had been avoided in a year, it could not determine that emergency department waiting times and visits had dropped as a result, while the RACGP states boosting existing GP services would have been more efficient than establishing 87 new facilities.

- ABC Online and Radio National report young homeless people are experiencing high rates of self-harm and suicide because they can't access early mental health intervention resources, according to research by the Melbourne City Mission and Orygen.
- The Daily Mail (Online) leads coverage reporting Prime Minister Anthony Albanese has visited his fourth Urgent Care Clinic so far this election to promote Labor's healthcare policies, while noting that the clinics have provided free care to 1.3 million Australians.
- ABC News leads coverage reporting almost $5 million of illegal tobacco has been seized by Victoria Police, the Therapeutic Goods Association and the Australian Taxation Office in raids on 12 tobacconists this week, with 14 people charged on summons.

Summit Pharmacy fined by TGA

Pharmacy Daily, Other, 15/04/2025

The Therapeutic Goods Administration (TGA) has issued four infringement notices totalling $75,120 to Queensland-based Summit Pharmacy for the alleged unlawful manufacturing of medicinal cannabis products. Summit Pharmacy has paid all four infringement notices. The infringement notices followed an inspection by the TGA and Queensland Health in Aug last year that found the pharmacy was manufacturing medicinal cannabis oils in bulk amounts, in alleged contravention of the Therapeutic Goods Act 1989.

Global desalination leader Veolia to double operational capacity in Australia

Daily Telegraph Australia, Other, 15/04/2025, Taylah Fellows

Australia must urgently invest in desalination and recycled water projects or risk running dry, with global water demand forecast to outweigh supply for five billion people by 2050. [...] There is also significant opportunity for investment in recycled water, however, public perception of the technology has delayed this market, despite rising concerns over PFAS contamination.

ABC, 7:30, 15/04/2025, Sarah Ferguson

Tuesday night's edition of 7.30 takes a look into the concerns of Blue Mountains residents over the high levels of PFAS detected in the local water supply. Sydney Water assured locals that water from the Medlow Dam was safe to drink but high PFAS concentrations were detected in their blood tests, which led to a class action suit. Suspensions rose further when Sydney Water's managing director, Roch Cheroux, resigned amid ongoing investigations by Water NSW and a state parliamentary inquiry.
