EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

- The Sun Herald \(page 14\) reports that weight loss drug Wegovy has been approved to be subsidised under the PBS to treat obesity in patients who have established heart disease. A Novo Nordisk spokesman said it was "an important first step toward securing more equitable access".
- The Sunday Mail Brisbane \(page 3\) reports that illicit tobacconists in Queensland are shifting sales to public places such as fast-food car parks, using QR codes and WhatsApp to arrange handovers. A Queensland Health spokeswoman said the three-month closure of 159 stores and the seizure of $16.8 million worth of illegal products had significantly disrupted illicit supply and shifted sales back to compliant businesses.
- The Sunday Mail Brisbane \(page 7\) reports that parents of children using Hummingbird House have called for a meeting with Wesley Mission Queensland to clarify the hospice's future. Families expressed concerns over recent staffing and management changes, cancelled admissions, and a lack of consultation affecting care and support for children with life-limiting conditions.

- The Sunday Territorian (page 1) reports that the NT government has announced a ban on gender-affirming hormones and puberty blockers for patients under 18. NT Health Minister Steve Edgington said "Territory kids deserve to grow up free from these dangerous ideologically driven practices with irreversible consequences".

CHRONIC CONDITIONS AND SCREENING

'Sickening': Docs fear teen tanning trends' results

Sunday Telegraph, General News, 21/12/2025, Isabella Pesch and Jackie Sinnerton, Page 21

Young Australians are causing irreversible damage to their skin as they jump on "shocking and sickening" tanning trends being circulated online. Videos and photos encouraging people to make their own tanning oils, avoid sunscreen and applauding prominent tan lines have exploded in popularity, including harmful trends such as showing off "sun tattoos" - where the skin is deliberately branded by using SPF to outline a pattern then being overexposed to harmful sunburn to leave a temporary 'tattoo' of lighter skin underneath.
